What We Recommend

You are ready to wash your car. What are the best options that will help conserve water?

Washing your car at home Uses More Water

- Washing your car at home can use more than 100 gallons of water.
- Soaps and detergents used to wash your car, along with the dirty water most often run into storm drains, carrying the pollutants through the gutters to ponding basins.

Save Water - Use a Professional Car Wash

- Car washes are the most efficient means to clean your car; the average car wash that recycles water is less than 35 gallons of water.
- Recycling allows the water to be cleaned and treated before being reused for subsequent car washes.
